ANTI-SEMITIC RIOTS ARE RENEWED BY STUDENTS

BUDAPEST, Nov. 15.—The truce effected by the Hungarian Government with the anti-Semitic student organizations for the toleration of Jewish students in the universities and colleges was broken today. After less than a week has elapsed since the colleges were reopened, anti-Semitic attacks were renewed this morning at the University of Budapest and the Technical Institute.

The dean of the institute immediately posted an announcement that the institution would be closed. Lord Brooks—"The beauty of that American hellraiser would quite overcome an ordinary man." Lord Henderson—"So it would a peer!"

was what the Crown was relying upon in the Rosman case. There were no eyewitnesses to the alleged crime.

"You have first to decide whether the child was born alive, and then whether the accused by some means caused the child's death. The life of the child after birth must be shown before the killing can be established," the court remarked.

NO SUCH EVIDENCE
Mr. Justice Macdonald said if the jury could find that the child was alive, and that the accused, by accident, had strangled the infant, it might be a case of manslaughter. However, there was no evidence adduced or any suggestion made during the trial that the death of the child had resulted from any accident.

"If you find that the Crown has proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the child lived after birth, and that the accused was responsible for its death, then you must return a verdict of guilty. If, however, there is a reasonable doubt in your mind, the doubt must be given in favor of the accused, and a finding of not guilty brought in," concluded His Lordship.

Mr. Jackson, K.C., defence counsel, in addressing the jury, said the accused had frankly stated from the witness box the facts of the birth of her child. She had testified that the child was dead when she recovered from unconsciousness at the time of its birth.

QUESTION OF DOUBT
"If there is a reasonable explanation of the child's death, except from the suggestion of the Crown that Lydia killed the child, that conclusion must be given to the accused's benefit. There can be no doubt in your minds," said Mr. Jackson, "that this asphyxia which caused the baby's death, might be from any one of a large number of causes, even if the child's death could have been caused by the stricture of the neck by a piece of ribbon, if other causes of death have not been satisfactorily explained away in this case, Lydia Rosman is entitled to the benefit of the doubt."

"I suggest to you, gentlemen of the jury, that the child's death was not caused by the stricture of the throat, but by asphyxia caused in one of a half-dozen different ways," Mr. Jackson asserted.

Mr. Jackson said that mothers have been known to have murdered children. "If the child is born alive, final, vicious mind in this case, and a motive for murder, which I say there is not, is it possible that Lydia would have taken the child next step—to destroy the evidence. Lydia could have sent the body away with her sister Martha. But she did not. She placed the child in her room, and a ribbon she used for her hair, around the child, and placed the body in her apron."

"The ribbon around the child's neck was tied with a bow-knot. Can you imagine any woman or girl using a ribbon tied in a bow-knot as a throatier?" Mr. Jackson asked.

PROVES THE FACTS
Mr. Johnson, K.C., Crown prosecutor, told the jury that he was not in court seeking a verdict. The Crown did not look for victims or martyrs. He was present to produce the facts in connection with the Rosman case. The onus was upon the Crown to prove that there was a dead body of a child, and that the accused was responsible for the child's death.

"You are the sole judges of the facts. It is for you to determine, having heard the evidence in the case, whether the accused is guilty of the crime for which she is charged," Mr. Johnson said.

Mr. Johnson stated that sympathy frequently entered into cases such as was being tried, and persons felt sorry for the accused in trouble. "Sympathy plays no part in a criminal prosecution," Mr. Johnson stated. "Put sympathy out of consideration in this matter, and deal with the facts as presented to you."

The jury was composed of the following: Mr. A. R. Nex (foreman), Messrs. Henry Gill, Percival C. George, Frederick Nease, James Strirling, Robert Cleasby, Herbert Mercer, William Henry Duckworth, Allan D. Ballantyne, Henry Hardy, Leonard Wilson Noble, and George Samuel Lowe.

LYDIA SORBS STORY
Lydia Catharine Rosman, the accused, and Dr. J. H. Moore were the two witnesses for the defence.

Lydia trembled greatly as she stood on the stand and sobbed out her story of the birth of the child, and her subsequent actions. She used a handkerchief continually to remove the tears which streamed down her face.

The accused, eighteen years of age, said she worked as a dressmaker on Salt Spring Island, and occupied a room in her house. On April 10 she went away on a holiday, returning on April 23.

"You did have a baby?" Mr. Jackson asked Lydia.

"Yes, but I did not know I was going to," she answered.

Observing that the girl was under great strain, His Lordship ordered that complete silence be preserved in the courtroom.

Witness described the birth of the child unattended, and said that she did not remember the child moving or making any noise. She decided that the infant was dead, and wrapped the baby up in her apron and placed it where she usually put the soiled laundry.

Witness said she was sent to her mother's home by Mrs. Oxenham. In response to a question by Mr. Jackson, the accused said she would not have minded having a baby, as she was very fond of children.

THE BLACK RIBBON
Mr. Johnson asked Lydia when she placed the black ribbon around the child's neck and she replied that it was just before she wrapped the body in her apron.

Mr. Johnson—"What did you put the ribbon around its neck for?"

Lydia—"I don't know what I did it for."

Mr. Jackson—"Where did you get the ribbon from?"

"I took it from the dresser at the head of my bed."

"Was it a ribbon used for decorating yourself?"

TAYLOR STANDS TRIAL ON BANK DRAFT CHARGE

Mexico, was in another business and had made $20,000 last year.

Witness said Taylor represented himself as being a successful salesman of bonds and had a position with a financial house on the Mainland. The accused said that in his native province, New Brunswick, he had sold $100,000 worth of bonds and gave witness the impression that all his family were doing well.

"Taylor wanted me to go down to a bank and identify him. I introduced him to Mr. Stevens, manager of the Royal Bank. He said he wanted to draw $300 on his brother in Mexico. Mr. Stevens asked him why he wanted to do that, and the accused said he had to make good that sum which he had lost in connection with collections on bonds for his firm. The accused said he couldn't go back to his work in Vancouver without the money, or he would lose his job. He stated he had notified his brother that he would draw on him for $300."

ENDORSES DRAFT
"I endorsed the draft," Griffiths continued, "and the $300 was paid to Taylor by the banker. We left the bank together, and the next time I saw him after that day was at the police station. I received a letter from the bank manager, informing me that the draft had not been honored. On August 11 I went down to the bank and tendered my cheque for $300 for payment of the draft that I had been induced to endorse."

Mr. Justice Macdonald "Did you ever receive any of that money back?"

"It is still owing me. I've lost it all, right," replied witness, who said he had made a number of attempts to locate Taylor, but without success.

Mr. Moreby asked witness what induced him to endorse the draft.

"Taylor's statement that he had a job in Vancouver, which led me to believe he was earning money, together with the fine things he said about his family."

Cross-examined by Mr. Henderson, witness said he had known for many years Taylor's father, who was a former bank manager here. He said Taylor had made no mention to him of having been in the bank that he was in need of money.

Mr. Henderson "Did Taylor ask you to endorse the draft?"

"No, the banker asked me to endorse the draft in two places. There was nothing said about endorsement until we got to the bank."

BANK MANAGER
George Herbert Stevens, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, said Mr. Griffiths introduced Taylor to him at the bank on July 13 as the son of a former manager of the bank. Witness corroborated the previous witness in regard to Taylor's need for money and that Taylor had said he had notified his brother he was going to draw on him for $300.

"I asked Mr. Griffiths if he would endorse the draft, and he said that he knew Taylor's family very well and would do so. The draft was forwarded to Mexico for collection, and was returned dishonored on July 28. Mr. Griffiths, several days later, came down to the bank and asked me to endorse the draft," witness testified.

The jury trying the case is composed of the following: Frank Cook (foreman), Harriett Walters, Walter P. Tilley, David Wilson, James Robert, Katie Elston, William Woodcock, Thomas J. Fox, Charles W. Jordan, Leonard C. Ostler, Henry Eagle and Alexander L. Innes.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Negotiations toward a flat rate of $50 for paid passage from Great Britain to Canada for prospective migrants are still continuing, no settlement having been reached as yet.

PRESBYTERIANS TO BRING BRITISHERS

WINNIPEG, Nov. 15.—An earnest appeal for aid in building up the number of Britishers in Canada was made by P. G. Morrison, Western representative of the British Settlement Society, at the annual meeting of the Manitoba synod of the Presbyterian Church here.

Not for seventeen years had Canada had an immigration policy that aimed specifically at primarily settling the country with British stock. Mr. Morrison declared, in explaining that the British Settlement Society is the only private immigration body with a charter enabling it to select emigrants for reduced passages and other privileges. Mr. Morrison said the society was conducted by the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. A. T. MacIntosh, of Selkirk, Man., revealed that the society plans to place 200 families from Britain in Saskatchewan next year.

"If it hadn't been for Gerald we wouldn't be here," were Mrs. Batten's first words. She referred to Gerald Burton, a Barbados negro fireman aboard the Vestris, and one of the survivors landed here.

When their lifeboat capsized he was with Mrs. Batten and Mrs. Mary Ulrich.

"Stay with me and I won't let you drown," He didn't. Swimming about for more than twenty hours, he always concentrated his attention on the weakest of the women and enabled them to rest.

Mrs. Batten took off from the Vestris in lifeboat No. 8, which was much overloaded. They met another boat which contained only five members of the Vestris' crew. Mrs. Devore made the transfer to it, but when Mrs. Batten attempted it, she said she was pushed back with an ear. No. 8 was sinking from the overload, and despite her pleas, the negroes in the other boat pushed off. Soon afterward No. 8 capsized.

It was righted, but only to be overturned by another wave. This was repeated six times. Mrs. Batten said, and each time the boat's occupants were dumped into the sea the number of survivors grew fewer.

The men gradually weakened by fighting and bailing the craft, were among the first to sink. With them gone, the women were forced to cast away and stay afloat, as best they could. Just four survivors remained when the Wyoming reached the scene. Mrs. Batten, Mrs. Ulrich, and Burton and John Harris, members of the crew. The boat was found bottom up.

Mrs. Rita lost her husband and a child; Mrs. Ulrich lost a child, but her husband was saved; Mrs. Dolores Donli's husband also was saved. When they were taken aboard the battleship they were placed in the officers' quarters and kept wrapped in hot blankets.

Shirts were made for them by the ship's tailor, from sailors' jumpers, and the regulation middie blouses and tennis shoes were provided from the ship's stores.

WAS MARRIED IN FIRST CATHEDRAL BUILDING ON HILL
Mrs. Edward M. Mohun, who officiated at the unveiling of the tablet marking the northeast bastion of Fort Victoria on Wednesday, was a caller at The Colonial office yesterday to correct a mistake which arose in connection with one story about the ceremony. It had been stated on apparently responsible authority that she was married in the fort, but this, she says, is an error.

Her first marriage, to Mr. Newton, took place at the first Christ Church Cathedral, which was burned in 1872, and she believes there are not many survivors who were wedded in that church, the first Anglican building in the Colony of Vancouver Island.

The full story of her early life is shortly to appear in a book on the pioneer women of Vancouver Island.

MINISTER FROM FRANCE ENTERS OTTAWA DUTIES

Premier and Other Members of Government Cordially Welcome M. Jean Knight on His Arrival

LEGATION BUILDING TO BE CONSIDERED

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Canada today officially welcomed the first Minister from France to be appointed to the Dominion, M. Jean Knight. Detaining in the capital shortly after noon, the new ministerial representative for the French Republic was greeted by Premier Mackenzie King, members of the Dominion Cabinet, Major Willis Osborne and E. C. Neville from Government House, and Henri Courcier, first secretary to the French Legation in Canada.

Tomorrow morning France's minister will present his credentials to His Excellency Viscount Willingdon, at Government House. In the evening the Government of Canada will tender an official dinner to Mr. Knight.

Questioned in regard to the trade treaty between Canada and France, Mr. Knight said he had no instructions in the matter. He was unaware, he said, of any proposed changes in the trade agreement. The question of building a French legation in the capital was a matter, the French minister stated, which would probably engage his attention in the near future. Mr. Knight asked to be excused from further discussion of his new position until he had presented his credentials to His Excellency the Governor-General.

Importation of Liquor Alleged to Be Unlawful

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15.—Charged with illegally importing liquor from another province, a representative of the Scottish Canadian Importers appeared before Police Magistrate J. A. Finlay. The case was remanded to November 22. The charge is laid against the company and not against an individual, and reads: "That the company did unlawfully import into the Province of British Columbia from a place in Ontario, intoxicating liquors, to wit: One carload of Scotch liquor, contrary to the provisions of the Importation of Intoxicating Liquor Act, Chapter 31, Revised Statutes of Canada."

NOT BRITAIN'S FAULT

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The House of Lords tonight defeated a motion by Lord Carmichael, Acting Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said that the backward position of disarmament, which he deplored, was not in any way due to any action or omission on the part of the Baldwin Government.

Owe Lives to Heroism of Dead Father

ONE of the greatest epics of heroism the North Country has ever recorded has been written into history with the death of George Ferguson, Kearns Township farmer, near New Liskeard, Ontario, who gave his life that his sons might live, when fire destroyed their little home. His body a flaming torch, he rushed into the cabin and bore the three boys to safety, and later died in hospital. The illustration shows the survivors and scene of the tragedy. (2) shows Walter Ferguson, seven, whose feet and face were scorched. (3) is of Ernest, eight, on the left, and Hugh, five, right, lying in bed in the New Liskeard Hospital, with their hands and arms bandaged, and (4) shows all that remains of the farmhouse.

by all the ministers in preparing for improving the situation in British Columbia.

Three other ministers were present at the gathering and were afforded the opportunity to give short speeches. These were Hon. W. McKenzie, Minister of Mines, Hon. C. Shelly, Minister of Finance, and Hon. W. Atkinson, Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. McKenzie, in his address, praised the system that had been adopted of having tenders opened in public in the presence of the contractors who were bidding. That had been a policy that had been promised by the Conservatives, and was being carried out.

Referring to the opening of the tenders the day before, he said that there were contracts that would run into about $1,275,000 of the people's money. It was right that these should be opened in public. With the furnishing there would be an amount that would bring the expenditure on the case of the mentally deficient of about $2,000,000. This was one of the problems that was facing the province.

"My meals pained me instead of digesting and often I would spit up the undigested food," said Mr. Watson, who lives at 128 Medina Street. MEANING OF ARMISTICE IS TOLD CLUBMEN

Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe Reminds Rotary Club of Conditions of Growth in Decade

WARNS AGAINST FORGETFULNESS

"It is possible that out of the recent World War will come a universal world peace. This may easily take many generations to accomplish, but there is nothing to prevent us from working and praying for it in the meantime," said Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education for British Columbia, in an inspiring address on the national effects of the Armistice, which he delivered at the luncheon meeting of the Victoria Rotary Club, held in the Empress Hotel yesterday.

Mr. Herbert Anson, president of the club, introduced the speaker, who began his address by stating that everybody could remember some epoch in their own lives which had materially affected their existence from that date. "As it is with individuals, so it is with nations," said Mr. Hinchliffe, and he maintained that it was right and proper at this time of the year for an organization like the Rotary Club to ponder upon the effects of the Armistice, which had released a tremendous tension, that was now more strongly felt than by the men at the front, albeit they had the sensation beneath a very admirable "don't care" spirit, which went far towards the winning of the war.

A FORGETFUL WORLD "At this date," went on the speaker, "it is hard to realize the tremendous change of national outlook, which followed the signing of the Armistice. Today we have pupils in our high schools who cannot remember the end of the war, and in a very few years there will be members of the Rotary Club who will only know of the war through the accounts which we are able to hand down to them."

During the war, said Mr. Hinchliffe, there had been an opportunity for showing the grandest and noblest characteristics of the British people. The coming of peace had given a further opportunity for displaying British fairness and justice. It was a characteristic of the nation, that she should set about giving Germany a helping hand as soon as hostilities had been concluded. Never before had the national integrity of the Empire shown to such advantage as when she had gone quietly to work to pay her war debts.

"We must keep green the memory of those who bought our liberty and paid for it with their lives," he concluded, "but do not let us forget that there is such a thing as a living death. Don't you think that we might do just a little bit more for the men who have returned to us with their health shattered?"

TO HELP ARION CLUB The Minister of Education officiated in the drawing of six names from a hat, owners of which names were provided with seats for the Arion Club concert last night. The Rotary Club had bought the seats because they felt that the Arion Club should be supported in every way.

Mrs. Stokes, who was the guest of the club at luncheon, gave her husband a great deal of pleasure by singing "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes," and "Viva Carmichaela." She was accompanied by Mr. T. R. Myers. During the luncheon an excellent selection was played by the Rotary Club orchestra.

HECTIC MEETING HELD BY BOARD

Failures of Saanich Students Costly—Trustee Horner Compelled to Do Some Explaining

Failure of students to pass their examinations, resulting in added expense to the municipality, criticism of Trustee Horner and his use of the school carpenter, followed by an explanation from the trustee; criticism of the board's action in taking part in the secession question in Saanich, and a resolution passed by the board excluding Indians from the West Saanich School, featured the monthly meeting of the Saanich School Board.

Owing to the fact that the classes at the West Saanich School were too large, the school board decided to "refuse tuition to Indians unless they attended some other school. Trustee P. V. Hobbs, chairman of the board, opposed the motion. Trustee Horner said that it was up to the Indian Department to pay the tuition fees of the Indians. If this was done, the Saanich School Board would charge the West Saanich School and take care of them.

Trustee Horner criticized the school board for conferring with the Provincial Cabinet on the secession question and voting its protest.

D.R. MACDONALD ANALYZES STORY OF KING ARTHUR

Arthurian Legend, as Related Through the Centuries, Is Described by Lecturer

SAYS POETS HAVE USED LICENSE

"From my own point of view, King Arthur is essentially the creation of the Muse. His name belongs to the poets, who make out of him just what they like, from age to age," said Professor W. L. MacDonald, M.A., Ph.D., whose subject at the University Extension lecture last evening was "King Arthur of the Poets."

Mr. MacDonald said that the one idea which was constantly associated with King Arthur was that of service. In proof of that statement he drew the attention of his audience to the modern organization of the knights of the round table, the logical conclusion of democracy, he said, was embodied by this service.

THE ARTHURIAN LEGEND
Professor MacDonald outlined the story of King Arthur, as it applied to, and as it affected various stages of English history. Arthur, he said, was a leader of the Britons, whoever they might be. He was responsible for mobilizing his people in a great effort to drive out the Saxon invaders. So much for authentic history, from the legendary and mythological point of view, Arthur was a god, with a wonderful horse and sword, the reputed existence of which can be traced to Celtic superstition.

ACCRETION OF TRADITION
The story of his conquests of castles and other military victories, on the other hand, pointed, in the speaker's opinion, to a Norman origin. The churchmen who wrote of him at the time of the Norman Conquest made him out to be a great Christian. As a matter of fact, said Professor MacDonald, he was probably a great pagan.

The twelfth century, when the men of the country were at the crusades, and when the Virgin Mary was prevalent, was necessarily an age of women, and therefore an age of chivalry, he argued. Therefore the poets made of King Arthur exactly what they thought would be most desirable to their readers, playing upon a feudalism, which would appeal in an age of feudalism, with the king as the centre of the system. At this time the Round Table legend came into being. Again this might be traced to Celtic origin.

From the thirteenth to the fifteenth century, said Professor MacDonald, was an age of democracy, as compared with previous centuries. The king was being overwhelmed by his powerful nobles, and the king therefore became the background in the Arthurian legend. In fact, the subject of ballad poetry, and was taken by a leading poet of the time to Constantinople, where he was made to undergo some very undignified adventures.

INFLUENCE OF RENAISSANCE
The Renaissance, he said, was the age of enlightenment, the age when rationalism was beginning, and the age when the Empire was very much alive to her advancement. The Round Table Association was established, and Spenser wrote his "Faerie Queen," which assured the king of the legend of King Arthur.

"Blackmore," he continued, "rode King Arthur out of the country through twenty-four poems of the worst English which has ever been written. At the beginning of the nineteenth century, in the full flush of what is known as the 'Romantic Revival,' of which the characteristics were those of the age of romanticism, it was a phenomenon, in Professor MacDonald's opinion, that there should be no reference to King Arthur, or the legend which surrounds him. The only man who tackled the matter with conviction was Sir Walter Scott, and he could almost be placed in the Tennyson era.

With regard to the late poet laureate, the speaker said: "I suppose that Tennyson and the Arthur legend are inseparable to the common mind. Tennyson was a man who knew most profoundly what his generation wanted. In the year 1842 he published 'Morte D'Arthur,' which was so popular that he published the 'Idylls of the King' in the year 1859."

Mr. A. B. Sanders, president of the University Extension Association of Victoria, in introducing the speaker, said that he had wandered in his youth from Tintagel, in Cornwall, in Edinburgh, in Scotland, where he had found traces of King Arthur, and the only conclusion to be drawn was that the central figure of mythical legend must have come from the West Country.

A teacher in a local Sunday school wanted to reprove a small boy. "Johnnie," she said, quite solemnly, "I'm afraid I shall never meet you in the better land." Johnnie gave her a look of astonishment. "Why, teacher," he said, "what ever have you been doing now?"

WOUND RECEIVED AT COURCELETTE FATAL

CAPT. THE HON. JOHN FLINT CAHOON

Minister without portfolio, and assistant minister of highways in the Nova Scotia Government, who died recently at Halifax, where he had been a patient for several weeks following a recurrence of a serious disability, resulting from wounds suffered in the Battle of Courcelette in 1916, while he was serving with the Canadian Engineers in France. He was thirty-nine years old. Capt. Cahoon was a son of C. H. Cahoon, K.C., M.P., of Montreal. A surgeon in Yarmouth, a classmate of Capt. Cahoon, performed an operation, that he left the patient a helpless invalid, relieved him of the constant pain that had remained from the time the wound was received, and Capt. Cahoon returned to active life, although confined to an invalid chair. He made his first public appearance at a luncheon in Halifax in 1923, and from that time his service as a speaker was constant in many parts of the province and elsewhere.

DOUGLAS DAY MONDAY NEXT

POSTS OF NATIVE SONS OF BRITISH COLUMBIA WILL COMMEMORATE EVENT

Citizens Are Invited to Wear Sprigs of Fir on That Day to Mark Historic Occasion

Next Monday will be Douglas Day, and Victorians are asked to wear sprigs of fir in commemoration of the birthday of the Crown Colony of British Columbia, which event took place on November 19, 1858.

Victoria Post, No. 1, Native Sons of British Columbia, will distribute boxes containing fir in local stores, banks, hotels, cigar stands and other places frequented by the public. The sprigs of fir are free, and citizens are invited to take them and wear them on Monday.

Other posts of the Native Sons of British Columbia will be fittingly mark Douglas Day this year as they have done in the past.

On November 19, 1858, James Douglas took oath of office as Governor of the Colony of British Columbia, at Fort Langley. He had previously been appointed Governor of the separate Colony of Vancouver Island, following the retirement in 1861 of Governor Blanshard, the first incumbent. It was at Langley, however, that he was sworn in as chief executive of the newly-formed Colony of British Columbia, and coincident with the proclamation announcing the establishment of colonial government was read the territory was taken from the company of the fur company and placed under the jurisdiction of the Crown.

WOOL POOL TO BE LIKE WHEAT POOL

EDMONTON, Nov. 15.—Wool growers of Alberta who are proposing to organize a co-operative marketing pool on lines similar to those of wheat pool, moved a step nearer that end at a conference with Premier Brownlee, at which advice was sought and given on the question of procedure. The meeting, which was continued on of one held some weeks ago, was attended by representatives of five co-operative selling organizations among the wool growers in different parts of the province.

When a pool is formed it will be on a contract basis, as in the wheat pool, instead of the voluntary basis in which the Alberta growers are now marketing through the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers' Association.

Details of the proposed new plan were discussed, including special the contract terms, and Mr. Brownlee addressed the pool men as to how an effective organization might be built up. It is likely that definite action will be taken in the near future.

She was very young and essentially modern, but a slight frown spoiled her matchless forehead. "Mumme, dear," she began petulantly. "I am having dinner with Dennis tonight and I can't find my new frock anywhere. Do you know where it is?"

Her mother looked up from her novel. "Look again, dear," she said, "perhaps you've got it on."

Fashion Fancies

By Marie Belmont

Here is a satin frock which has a number of new and important points. First of all, although its waist suggests the bolero, the effect is achieved, not by a bolero at all, but by the fact that it opens down the back. All the fullness, of course, is centred in the back; the front is quite straight. The skirt has insets of a grey white satin and the molded waistline has bands of the lighter satin to contrast with the rest of the frock, which, incidentally, is of black.

Bazaar at Temple Hall Is Planned

Plans have been announced by the executive committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Victoria City Temple, concerning the bazaar to be held at Temple Hall by the ladies on November 19 and 20.

Announcing a new departure from previous years, when the bazaar was a feature of the fancy fair and circus, a change has been made this year, separating the bazaar and making it a distinctive function of its own, dissociated from the fair and circus of the Amusements which will be held a month later.

The arrangements thus far are as follows: As a special instrumental music feature, a huge Columbia-Kaiser Electric gramophone will be used on the first day, Monday, by courtesy of Messrs. Davis & King. The second day the mammoth Victor Orthophonic will be heard, by courtesy of Messrs. Fletcher Brothers.

On Monday afternoon, commencing at 3 o'clock, there will be a dance programme by the pupils of the Hillside Dancing Academy. Violin solos will be rendered by Mrs. Heatherbell; Mr. Le Frame rendering vocal solos. Mrs. Gordon Vail will also render several monologues. Following the afternoon programme, tea will be served.

On Monday evening the Art School of Dancing will render a full programme by its pupils, Mrs. Marion Thornborough and Mr. George Tait will render violin solos, and Mr. Whiteoak will give club-swinging demonstrations. Vocal solos will be rendered by Miss Ethel Parsons and Mrs. Marion Thornborough.

On Tuesday afternoon there will be dances by the pupils of Miss Jennie Boyd; vocal solos by Mrs. Shrimpton and Mrs. Jackson; and a pianoforte duet by Miss and Douglas Clark.

In the evening of Tuesday Miss Mona Jewell's pupils will render a dance programme. Vocal numbers will be given by Miss May Lewis, a vocal duet by Mr. and Mrs. Holt, a recitation of the club-swinging demonstrations by Mr. Whiteoak, piano duets by the Misses Pryth.

The entire premises of Temple Hall will be pressed into service for this big event, every hall in the institution being used, with beautiful decorations in every room. Stalls will be erected in the main hall as follows:

Refreshments, Mrs. Williams; candy, Mrs. Celler; fancywork, Mrs. Dash; children's cotton-picking trees, Mrs. Hull; home cooking, Mesdames Edwards and Clark; novelty, Mesdames Lumley and Newbigging; handkerchiefs, Mesdames Ridland and Varney; ice cream, Mesdames Otto and Hemm.

Mrs. Semple will be in charge of the two days' entertainment programme. The bazaar will be opened at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon, November 19, by Mrs. Simon F. Tolmie. On the second day it will be opened by Mrs. A. E. Humphries. The many friends of the City Temple are reminded that this bazaar is not to be confused with the annual Armistice event, which is to take place on December 19 to 22.

Effort Made to Have Bible Read in City Schools

In a letter from the Native Daughters of British Columbia, the city school board has been asked to extend its attitude on whether the Dougal authorized version of the Bible should be read in the public schools without comment.

"The letter to the school board in part reads as follows: 'Our organization has been asked with other societies to endorse a resolution to the effect that the Local Council of Women endeavor to have the Dougal authorized version of the Bible read in schools without comment.

"The matter has been placed in the hands of a special committee to ascertain the views of other organizations. We would appreciate a letter from you outlining the attitude of the school board."

American to Speak On U.S. Celebrities

A public lecture will be given in the Memorial Hall on Monday, November 19, at 8 p.m., by Mr. Rufus R. Wilson, on "American Celebrities." Mr. Wilson is president of the Western Metals Corporation, and lives in Seattle. The lecture is under the auspices of the Men's Parish Guild, and its proceeds will be devoted to their funds. Ticket may be obtained at the Memorial Hall, the Deanery, and from officers and members of the Guild. Mr. R. R. Wilson has played many parts and has had a wide experience of life in America.

His varied qualifications may be gauged by the following statement of his doings: Author, publicity expert, and journalist, magazine-writer, and newspaper syndicate manager, on staff of Brooklyn Eagle, 1906; engaged in reform work, 1910; organizer of Chinese famine relief work, 1910; secretary of Seattle Commercial Club, 1911; secretary of Humboldt Development Co., California, 1912-14; community advertiser, New York, 1914-16; secretary of National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, 1917-21; organizing secretary of first World Cotton Conference, New Orleans, 1919.

Mr. Wilson is author of the following works: "Rambles in Colonial Byways," "Washington, the Capital City," "New York, Old and New," "Lincoln in Caricature," "New England in Letters," "The Sea Rovers," "A Noble Company of Adventurers," "Editor of Burnaby's Travels Through North America," "Heath's Memoirs of the American War," "Moultre's Memoirs of the American Revolution."

Here is an amusing story from Ceylon, told of a well-known planter. A friend called at his bungalow one day to see him, and found his wife busily engaged painting the house. The lady informed the visitor that he would find her husband fishing down the river.

Sure enough he found him there all right busily engaged catching, or trying to catch, trout. The visitor at once remonstrated with him for spending his time fishing while his wife was busy painting the bungalow.

To which the angler replied: "Well, you see, it's just like this. The wife doesn't ken anythin' about fishin', and I dinna ken anythin' about paintin'."

CIVIL SERVANTS WELL ORGANIZED

Membership in the Amalgamated Civil Servants' Association is rapidly increasing, according to a letter received by the local secretary, Mr. Aubrey Jones, from the Dominion secretary, Mr. Fred Knowles.

The local membership was increased by twenty at the last meeting, while the Dominion secretary writes from Montreal to say that the association is now well organized in that city.

In his letter to Mr. Jones he states that the Public Works Federation of Montreal voted to disband their organization, thus withdrawing from the Civil Service Federation and Public Works Federation. A total of eighty-seven members joined the Amalgamated Civil Servants before the disbanding of the organization could be completed.

Railway and canal employees at Soulanges Canal had joined 113 strong, while at Lachine Canal another 132 civil servants joined the association. The Department of Immigration in Montreal had signed up 100 per cent, while twenty-seven members of the Department of Agriculture in the same city had also joined.

A total of 116 members of the Department of National Revenue had joined, as also had eighty-seven members of the postoffice department.

Are You There, Mars?

THE British Postoffice co-operated in an attempt to communicate with the planet Mars. A message was sent from the Rugby wireless station, and postoffice engineers listened on a special receiving set at St. Alban's for a reply, but no reply came. The experiment was undertaken at the request of Dr. Mansfield Robinson, ex-town clerk of Shoreditch, and was handled by the postoffice as an ordinary commercial transaction. The photo shows Dr. Robinson, with his psycho-telepathic motor-meter and wireless.

B. C. Fox Breeding Industry Advances

Meeting of Fox Breeders Will Be Held on Occasion of Winter Fair Next Month
By W. MILLER HIGGS

grounds, Hastings Park, Vancouver, this year there will be no silver foxes at the Winter Fair. This decision was reached by the management a few weeks ago, who regretted having so to decide after having stated that a fox show would be held. Next year a special building will be set aside for the encouragement of this branch of livestock farming, which is so rapidly developing throughout British Columbia and especially so upon the Pacific Coast, and after the three very successful fox shows which have been held in Vancouver and two in Victoria, there is no question that with proper organization an exhibition of silver foxes, blue foxes, cross and other varieties of foxes and fur-bearing animals can be built up upon the Pacific Coast to be second to no other in the whole Dominion.

FOX BREEDERS TO MEET
With this object in view, and the reorganization of the British Columbia Silver Fox Breeders' Association to be affiliated with the Canadian National Association, a special meeting of fox breeders and all interested in furthering the breeding of fur-bearing animals in this province has been arranged in connection with the Winter Fair. The management having kindly placed the Convention Hall, on the request of several prominent fox breeders, at their disposal for the afternoon of Wednesday, November 28, the meeting being scheduled for 3 o'clock. It is hoped that all interested in this industry will bear this in mind and make a very special effort to be present for it is one that a province-wide organization should exist for the assistance of all throughout the province.

The day has passed when there existed a question as to the profitable raising of fur-bearing animals in captivity in British Columbia, when the question as to climatic conditions being suitable upon the Coast was one of doubt.

During the last three or four years it has been very clearly demonstrated that some of the best pelts have been taken from animals raised in captivity upon the ranches of the Coast, pelts which have commanded the highest prices at the fur auction sales in Winnipeg, Montreal, New York and London. Today there is an ever increasing number of fur farmers in British Columbia, and there is no question that the best pelts will ever command a high figure and that the best in all kinds of fur-bearing stock will always yield a very handsome return upon the capital invested and the thought and care given to the business.

TROUBLES OF BOOM
As in all new enterprises there are always those who will rush in wildly with the "Get rich quick" idea and there are, too, always those whose one idea seems to be to exploit the public to their own individual gain, irrespective of the disastrous results which usually follow the schemes of those who promote companies for individual gain at the expense of the public and the development of an industry. The fur farming industry in British Columbia has been by no means free from such influence and has received a serious setback therefrom. There are, however, quite a number of breeders today with a few pairs of foxes or other fur-bearing animals quietly going ahead and gradually building up a remunerative business and are the real pioneers of what is destined to become one of the most profitable and successful branches of livestock farming in the province, a branch which can be combined with other branches of farming and livestock raising most successfully.

SEEK GROUPING AS LIVESTOCK
Up to the present time the fur farming of the province has been under the Game Board administration, but every effort is being made to have this rapidly developing industry and branch of livestock farming brought directly under the control of the Livestock Branch of the Department of Agriculture. The Department of Agriculture in the last administration and with the present Government have been and are keenly alive to the great possibilities for this industry throughout British Columbia, and with a British Columbia provincial association properly organized by the breeders, working in conjunction with the Government.

MADE IN CANADA BY THE C. TURNBULL CO. OF GALT, LIMITED

there is no doubt that the raising of fur-bearing animals in captivity can be made very profitable to the breeders and to the province.

The dampness of the Coast climate of British Columbia, combined with the cold nights experienced the year round, have proven to be ideal conditions for the production of fur with a wealth of thick undergrowth, and while the guard hair of the fox and other animals may not be of such length as is found in the colder regions of the province, yet even this can be remedied by careful selection in breeding and by feeding methods.

Prince Edward Island, the home of the silver fox breeding industry, has up to quite recent years had the monopoly in this business in the Dominion of Canada, but British Columbia breeders, having a remarkable and exceptional climate will, with proper organization, surpass in quality of fur production any other part of the Dominion in the very near future and British Columbia fur-bearing stock will be sought for from the East and for exportation to Europe.

A physician tells this joke of himself. A woman became ill and he was called to attend her. After she had lingered for several days with little change in her condition the weekly church paper came out with this item:

"Sister — is very ill at her home. Dr. — is attending her. Will all the brothers and sisters of the church pray for her?"

"BARBERRY BISH"

One Girl's Marriage Problems
By KATHLEEN NORRIS

But she would not let him escape. The tale of his trip to Cottonwood was not half told and she must cross-examine him again.

"Ah, don't—stay where you are! I only meant that I'd love always to be dainty and pretty if I could. But I get myself into old boots and sweaters because the work is so dirty. Tell me, did you happen to see Fox or Harry?"

Barry, mollified by her apologetic tone, readily began again, and Barbara, with Kate drowsing comfortably in her arms, listened and questioned him from beginning to end once more. The dishes cooled, the fires burned low and a soft wind cried about the roof of the hacienda. And Barbara, enthralled with the details of what had been to her only the everyday lives of commonplace and uninteresting neighbors a year or two ago, thought that Barry was more like himself than she had seen him in months, and that it was fortunate impulse that had taken him toward town today.

"And Link and Marianne didn't make a match of it after all?"

"No. They say that's all off."

"She did get that divorce last Spring. I know. It was in the paper."

"Well, I don't know why they didn't, but they didn't get married. Lucy told me the other day that she thought Margaret and her father were going abroad after Christmas and that Link is the president of the whole business. Crown prince stuff."

"Oh, I don't know. He's been working with the firm ever since he left college four or five years now!" Barbara reminded him leniently.

"This was the first time. But when, in a few days, Barry went to town again, and again had an exhilarating and absorbing afternoon with old friends, Barbara felt an odd sense of being hurt—of being slighted."

The third time, again only a few days later, he stayed away all night. Barbara waited for her supper until about eight o'clock, ate it philosophically with a book propped before her and with Kate's sociable gurgles from the centre of the couch keeping company with the eternal soft drip—drip—drip of the rain on the patio tiles.

But philosophical or not, she did not like it. Barry got home in the morning of the following day, rosy and soaking wet, cheerfully apologetic and matter-of-course. He brought a breath of fresh, cold air into the kitchen, was rapturous over the baby and sat chatting with his wife in an unworldly friendly and pleasant mood. Barbara, fighting inner resentment, went on with her preparations for lunch and her general straightening of the kitchen and tried to display only her usual manner.

"You weren't worried or anxious last night, Barberrry Bish?"

"Oh, no, I had Kate. I was all right."

"Every one in town was asking about you."

"That was nice." She heard the lifelessness, the uninterest of her own tone, but it couldn't be helped. To speak honestly now would be to reproach him.

"I stayed with Fox—Harry was there and we played rummy. I've not played rummy with those boys for years!"

"I thought you loathed Harry!" She couldn't help saying it, some ugly impulse stronger than herself spoke in her place.

"Harry? No. He's nice enough. I've always been fond of Harry!" And the maddening thing was that Barry believed what he was saying. Barbara told herself that she should be thankful that he was outgrowing his prejudices against the Cottonwood folk.

He made himself charmingly companionable and useful on this particular occasion. He brought wood and carried away ashes, swept the tiles of the patio vigorously, and was ravenously and appreciatively ready for lunch. He was, for an hour or two, in fact, the old, happy Barry, the Barry she had lost for dreary, struggling months. But it was a part of Barbara's dark mood that she resented this, too. He could be gracious and helpful when he wanted to, he could control his temper and make life agreeable for her. The trouble usually was that he did not care to make the effort.

It was hard to listen to him interestedly, to listen to him agree with her, to listen to him say that his visit had been most fortunate.

Yet what else could she do? To insist that he remain down there at the hacienda beside her, idling, fretting, quarreling, just because she was unable to accompany him into town, was to put herself into the ranks of the jealous, narrow-minded women who despised the part of dogs in the manger with their men. No, he had his life and his interests and she must shape her own independence.

True, she reflected, forcing herself to calm and amiability, she needed him. But Barry quite innocently drew her down the stairs, argument by plunging into the remaking of his play with great zest, exulting that his holiday had rested on the shoulders of his wife, and given him quite a new point of view on Napoleon III.

And this weapon he presently took from her hand to use in his own. He talked and talked and talked, jaded and began with quite obvious diplomacy to speak longingly of the stimulus the visit to Cottonwood had given him.

He thought he would take a long walk. Perhaps would take the highway, and if he did get into town, did Barbara need anything at the drygoods store or grocery?

She was too proud to protest. They were lingering at the luncheon table at about two o'clock when he introduced the subject skillfully. Barbara made no comment. She went on carefully feeding baked potato to the rapturous Kate.

Regarding Barry's movements there seemed to be nothing to say. No reason to be about town, take a walk through the heavy, muddy fields and roads, if he liked, no reason why, if he got a lift, he shouldn't go into town, and no real reason why he should not stay there over night.

The one real argument against all this—love for his wife and child and the need and desire to be with them—apparently did not enter into the matter at all—knowing Barry, one would know that it could not enter into it. Barbara was, not well, now, she was overworked and worried, physically handicapped, and made a prisoner by Kate's needs, and Barry, in the heavy winter weather, found no special amusement at home.

Suddenly Barbara became aware that Barry was watching the clock. He meant not only to get away, but to get away at a special moment; he was keeping an appointment with some one.

DIRECTOR TO HAVE BIG SETS

Radio Transmitters on ZR4 and ZR5 to Reach Nearly All Parts of World

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 15.—Radio transmitters capable of sending signals to virtually every part of the world will be installed in the two mammoth dirigibles, the ZR4 and ZR5, to be constructed for the navy.

It is the desire of the Navy Department that the new rigid airships be equipped with apparatus which will have a communication range equal to their cruising radius, which will be more than 8,000 miles. In case either ship should make trans-Pacific flights, its crew could keep in communication with Lakehurst or Washington virtually all the way.

It has been decided to use the Los Angeles as an experimental ship in determining the design for the radio equipment. Steps are being taken to develop equipment which will replace that now installed on the Los Angeles. Both the intermediate and high frequency sets will be replaced by the latest type transmitters, and the present wind-driven power generator will be removed and engine driven power will be substituted. Navy engineers say the present radio compass will be allowed to remain intact, as it has given satisfactory service, although it is possible that the receiving equipment may be replaced by some of more modern design.

The ships are to be powered with eight engines instead of five, as in the case of the Los Angeles, and the ignition systems of the engines will be shielded to improve radio reception on board.

The ships are to be of 6,500,000 cubic feet capacity, which is approximately three times the size of the Los Angeles.

HUDSON STRAIT EXPERT SILENT

ENGINEER RETURNS FROM INVESTIGATION OF NAVIGATION CONDITIONS

Will Express No Opinion Until Official Report Has Been Tabled in Parliament

QUEBEC, Nov. 15.—The Hudson Strait expedition which started from Halifax in July, 1927, with the object of establishing aids to navigation and securing scientific data on ice, wind and weather conditions in the strait the year round, was concluded yesterday with the return of the C.G.S. Montcalm, 21 command of Capt. John Hearn, to Quebec.

Major N. B. McLean, engineer in charge of the S. Lawrence channel from Montreal to Father Point, who was loaned by the Marine Department to take charge of the expedition, returned on the steamer, but declined to express any opinion regarding navigability of Hudson Strait before his official report has been tabled in the House, which will be some time next winter.

Press, Politics, Pulpit and Parents Are Themes for Question Box

Many problems are raised in the thirteen questions in the Question Box of Dr. Davies at City Temple service on Sunday evening, to which he proposes to give some measure of attention. They are as follows:

1. What effect does the sudden acquisition of wealth have upon a man in poor circumstances?
2. Why is it that the Canadian Pacific Railway does not patronize the Canadian drydock?
3. Why do newspapers, in the main, espouse one or the other political party?
4. Should my boy join the Boy Scouts?
5. Will my children appreciate their parents' sacrifices in giving them a thorough education?
6. What is radio?
7. Which is better: to attach oneself to one church, or to visit around, getting the point of view of all the others in turn?
8. What would be the result if England's 1,375,000 unemployed were transferred to Canada?
9. End of steel on Hudson Bay Railway?

JUSTIFIABLE OR NECESSARY TO THE WORKERS CONCERNED?

10. Are divorces too easily obtained in British Columbia?

11. Shall we abolish tag days?

12. Have you anything to say in favor of large families?

13. Is Democracy a failure?

OFFICIAL POSSESSES WIDE EXPERIENCE

Commissioner Whatmore Has Been Active Official in Salvation Army

Commissioner Whatmore, of the Salvation Army, whose expected departure for Australia by the Niagara on Wednesday was delayed under orders from the Army's international headquarters in London, has been in charge of the Army's work in Victoria, Tasmania, West and South Australia, for the past seven years. Previous to this he was head of the International Training Garrison, in London, which has now 700 young people in training for officers' positions. Most of his service has been, however, abroad, having had charge of Holland during the war, and having pioneered in Sweden and Italy in earlier years.

Referring to the proposed International Training Garrison to be erected at Denmark Hill, South London, as the special memorial of the Army's founder, Commissioner Whatmore stated that the total cost of £50,000 had been subscribed within £5,000, and building operations had already commenced. This project has been an object of special solicitude by General Bramwell Booth, a worthy memorial of his father, the centenary of whose birth falls in April of next year.

Commissioner Whatmore is the guest, along with his wife, of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Woodward, the latter being the sister of Mrs. Whatmore.

Wheat Stolen

VANCOUVER, Nov. 15.—Expressing his determination to assist the railway and harbor board authorities to check thefts of grain, Magistrate Shaw today found Frank and Sidney Miller guilty of receiving stolen wheat, the property of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The accused pleaded that they did not know the wheat was stolen, which drew the remark from the court that none save a fool would believe that youngsters such as the four who sold the wheat to the accused had come by the grain honestly.

Mrs. Newsway: "Your dancing is improving wonderfully, darling. Don't you remember how you used to fear my dresses?"

Mr. Newsway: "Y-e-s; but I wasn't buying them then."
